

SIG 08 – Motivation and Emotion

European Association for Research on Learning and Instruction

Welcome to the ICM 2018 in Aarhus, Denmark!

Dear Colleagues,

Welcome to the 16th International Conference on Motivation (ICM 2018), and welcome to Aarhus, Denmark!

The ICM 2018 is jointly organized by the Danish School of Education at Aarhus University and the EARLI SIG08: Motivation and Emotion. Every two years, the ICM provides a platform for researchers from all over the world to come together, present, and discuss both well-established and cutting edge research from the fields of motivation, emotion, and self-regulation, and to exchange ideas that enrich and inform theory development, new research, and practice in the field of education.

The theme of this year's conference is "Design for Motivation." Under this theme, research featured at the conference contributes not only to a better understanding of fundamental motivational, emotional, and self-regulatory processes but also to the development of design principles that can be used to create motivationally and emotionally supportive learning environments. Use-inspired basic research is thus prominently featured, focusing on such questions as: Which design principles have emerged as potent levers of change in the extant literature due to their influence on human motivation, emotion, self-regulation, and learning in educational settings? What are the likely mechanisms that can explain the complex influences of these design principles on motivation, emotion, self-regulation, and learning, to what populations do these mechanisms apply, and under what conditions? How can these principles be implemented in diverse educational settings, and with diverse learners? and How do different design principles support or clash with established educational principles in real-life settings? Our ability to adequately address these questions hinges upon both basic and applied research on motivation, emotion, and self-regulation.

The Organizing Committee is proud to present a diverse and stimulating scientific program featuring the work of international scholars from 29 countries from all over the world. Four internationally renowned keynote speakers will focus on key topics like supporting motivation for 21st century learning, possibilities for bridging the gap(s) between basic research and design practice, the nature and implications of intrinsic motivation and extrinsic rewards, and the importance of motivation for learning from setbacks. In addition to the four keynote speakers, the program includes 193 oral presentations organized in 20 symposia, 31 thematic paper sessions, and 46 posters. We would like to acknowledge and thank the International Scientific Board Members and all reviewers for their significant contribution to creating the conference program. Your contributions are truly appreciated!

We are also proud to continue our SIG's tradition of organizing a summer school for promising young researchers prior to the ICM 2018. The ICM 2018 Summer School took place at the Sandbjerg Estate in Sønderborg from the 12th to the 14th of August, and was co-organized by Aarhus University's Graduate School, Arts. Four distinguished scholars served as mentors for a group of 23 graduate students at various stages of their educational careers, who conduct research in the fields of motivation, emotion, and self-regulation.

Our commitment to supporting young researchers is not limited to the summer school. For the first time this year, our SIG8 junior coordinator organized a get together for junior researchers on the second day of the conference (over lunch). The main objective is to provide information about our SIG and to ensure that our junior members feel welcome in our community. This social event is open to graduate students and postdoctoral researchers.

We would like to conclude with a heartfelt thank you to everyone who has made the ICM 2018 possible, including the local and international organizing committee members, all involved members of Aarhus University, the international scientific board members, the EARLI leadership, all reviewers, and all participants.

Welcome to Aarhus and welcome to the ICM 2018!

On behalf of the Local Organizing Committee,
Niels Dohn, ICM 2018 Chair
